Mirlinda Dzafer is a mother, a professor of business at the University of Chicago, and the owner of an upscale sports bar, but the normalcy of her life hides a dark past. Spawned in a secret Soviet training program, she is recognized as the deadliest assassin on the planet. At the age of sixteen, she was forced to run for her life when five members of the Soviet program wiped out the others. She escaped to the United States where her first taste of freedom came during her academic studies in New York, but ended all too quickly when the five came after her. Trapped by circumstances, she had no choice, but to reverse the hunt and kill her pursuers. Her past called again when a Machiavellian plot to assassinate the U.S. president and vice president forced her to join forces with the FBI to take out five of the top six assassins in Europe. Now her hopes for a quiet life with her daughter Sanije are dashed when an assassin's bullet narrowly misses killing her while delivering a series of guest lectures in New York. Wounded, she flees to Europe to draw the killers away from her daughter and to learn who is behind the mysterious organization pursuing her. But when they attack her daughter, they awaken the dark soul of a consummate killer, transforming her once again into the assassin known as Sasha, and when Sasha goes hunting, people die.
