Playing Ball: When winning trumps honor, everyone loses. Dr. Corinda Marsh

Basketball is business, big business. The stakes are high. When one college president decides to have a championship regardless of the price, the dominoes begin to fall around him until he is toppled by his own game. Unfortunately, his fall brings down others who have no skin in the game. Choosing honor in a dishonorable world is a dangerous play. All the members of the President's team were not willing players. What is the price of honor in the world of athletics?
