Phoebe Blake, poor, alone and in her seventies, has returned to the rural community of Poetry, Oklahoma where she grew up. Having inherited a modest house that once belonged to her grandmother she plans to live out her days fulfilling her girlhood dream of becoming an author, but finds that the little town and the friends (including an ex-husband) have other plans. For Phoebe going home again provides so much more than the restful, rocking chair days of solitude she had in mind. (A 20,000 word Christian novella).
