'Owl Minerva's Overflying' is a very unique novel built from interconnected fantastic, poetic tales, culminating in apocalyptical love. A densely symbolic and psychological plot that touches deep realms of our human condition. This title is related to Hegel, the German philosopher who so strongly influenced Marx and many other 19th century writers. He mentions the owl to stress that only when civilizations reach their ultimate decay, their final throes, can philosophy utter something substantial on what was their history because such kind of truths may be caught only when they leave from the scene during dusk, i. e., only in retrospect. Thus, the look that philosophy addresses all of human history is analogous to that of an owl flying over the fields, because it always raises its flight with nightfall.

Is the 'Owl of Minerva' already flying over our present century so obscured by apocalyptic signs?"
by Florence Pessoa, American Philosopher.

Marcos Wagner eloquently evolves images that at first you believe you understand. Then, as you read on, you realize that the images have transmuted into something totally unexpected, and poignant. He does this while writing in a style that exudes a sensual interaction with nature that is extraordinary. Each story in this book is a gem of a different color, and taken together they are, indeed, a rainbow for your eyes.

By Dr Joseph Giovannoli, New York lawyer
