There are two types of people in our world: those who follow Judeo-Christian ethics and those who don't. What's the difference between these two groups, and how have the discrepancies affected our history...and how will they affect our future?

Ernst Aronsohn reviews these outlooks on life in his often humorous and always poignant, "You Can't Catch Trout with a Broomstick: The Unorthodox and Unauthorized Views of a Contemporary Jew," his philosophical treatise on mankind and our place within it. Filled with moving reminiscences, good sense, and logic, "You Can't Catch Trout with a Broomstick" is an elegant look at the differences which drive us apart and what may help to close the gap and bring us back together.
