A writer's life in the 21st century varies dramatically from writers even a decade ago. In a 24 hour period, a writer today may write a blog post, submit an article to an editor on another continent via e-mail, publish an e-book, update their social media statuses, and post a couple of tweets. Most days feel like you are navigating a literary minefield! This book delves into issues pertinent to the modern writer, providing a blueprint on how to succeed. The topics in this writing guide include blogging, publishing e-books, working with editors, dealing with critics, time management, writer's block, CVs, motivation, writing a book series, digital protection measures, deadlines, creative stress, query letters, writing environments, handling negative book reviews, pimping up your website, goal setting, finding your voice, copyright issues, respecting your writing, erotica writing, writing conferences, technostress, rejection, collaborative writing, and dozens of additional topics. The wisdom and input of over 170 writers is included in this writing guidebook. Here's to us, the modern writers who adapt no matter what the publishing world throws at us!
