Circular Breathing is a technique used by musicians who play wind instruments. Some musicians can hold musical notes for periods of time that seem to last almost forever. At times when the notes appear to be exhausted they lose their enchantment and become eerie. Incorporated herein are some people whose personas would never permit them to be escorted through a life of futility while others, just as notable, have succumbed to the process. Life's best notes are appreciated when they give us time to evaluate the quality of their movement and then anticipate the change as it segues. Life, vibrant life, thrives on activity, growth and community while existence may be nothing less than Circular Breathing that eventually segues into an agonal rhythm.
